AUGUST 2020

 (DAY 093 - 123)

Hi! Thank you for joining in with 365 Days of Doodles with TheDoodleGuide.

August is going to be about getting you ready to get back to school. You probably just got your vacation, but this won't be just a normal school day. There are buses and books, pens and pencils.....All round, a very fun and exciting month of doodling!

This booklet is made for anyone who likes to draw, doodle and create art in any form. All you need to do is print this out and use the daily prompts to doodle along with everyone else from around the world.

To keep track of your progress, I have provided you with four different doodling sheets to choose from:

- 1) A monthly doodle sheet, where you can do the entire months doodles on one page. It would make the doodles quite small, so for anyone pressed for time, this is an option.
- 2) A weekly doodle sheet where you have a bit more room and you can mark the days you are doodling.
- 3) A quartered sheet where you can draw four doodle days at a time.
- 4) A full sheet for a doodle a day.

There are other options too. If you're into digital drawing, feel free to use your iPad or digital drawing tool. If printing out and filing are not your thing, then a journal or drawing book to keep track of your progress is recommended. You can get a new book or even use an old one, it wouldn't matter. I will however, ask you to start your book or journal with a nice cover page that you create.

How to use this doodle booklet:

Print the book out (recommended) or work from a screen. Put your monthly list where you can see it and keep track of the day. Now all that's left is to draw, draw and draw some more. When you post on Instagram, please tag @TheDoodleGuide on the image, so we can have it on our tagged photos for everyone to see. Remember to add #TheDoodleGuide_365, #TheDoodleGuide_June2020 and your own unique tag to keep track of your progress.

A few rules before we start:

This is a resource that I have taken a lot of love, care and time to create, so that it may be enjoyed by as many people as possible.

While this is a resource which is designed to be printed out for personal use, please note that the reproduction of this booklet in any means, either in print or in digital form, for profit or mass distribution is strictly prohibited. The rights remain with the author as detailed at the end of each booklet. This is to be used to learn, not to earn!

Please be kind enough to respect the spirit in which this booklet has been created. It is there for everyone to enjoy.

xoxo, Apsi♥

For students, parents and educators alike, everyone has been looking forward to the holidays that fast approaching. After weeks of hard work and studies, you will be looking forward to kicking back and sleeping in late. But life is a never ending stream of new things to learn and discover. Can anyone honestly say, "I know everything"?

The theme for August is "Back to School". But this isn't just any ordinary school day. We are embarking on a journey to discover a fun way of getting back to school. From the ever loved and familiar school buses, to our favourite stationary, August has a whole list of things that would make getting ready for school a lot more fun and exciting.
